- As we recognize Suicide Awareness Month, remember this: you don't have to go through a difficult time by yourself. If you're struggling, reach out to someone you trust—a friend, parent, teacher, coach, counselor, or another trusted adult. And if you notice someone who doesn't seem like themselves, check in. Capturing Kids' Hearts teaches us that relationships matter. So let's keep looking out for each other. Notice. Listen. Include. Reach out. We're stronger when we do it together.
- Today, September 11th, our nation takes time to pause, reflect, and remember the events of 25 years ago. While 9/11 was a time of immense hardship and loss, it also revealed the power of human compassion, strength, and unity. In the hours, days, and weeks following that morning, millions of people came together. Strangers supported one another, communities rallied to help those in need, and countless individuals showed courage and selfless care. It showed us that even in the face of profound adversity, kindness and community remain our strongest responses. As we reflect today, we are reminded that we don't have to wait for a crisis to look out for one another. We can honor the legacy of unity every single day right here in our school and community through small, intentional acts of kindness, support, inclusion, gratitude and empathy. Let's carry the spirit of kindness, unity, and hope with us today and throughout the school year.
